GOSPEL REFLECTION:

Today's readings issue a challenge to the whole congregation but especially to the clergy and all preachers. We are supposed to live up to what we say we are, disciples and followers of Christ. We are, in a word, called to live by love, love in its deepest sense. This word "love" is much bandied about but imperfectly understood and practiced. Jesus gave the supreme example of its real meaning in his life, death and resurrection. But he did not die and rise, in order to prevent or excuse us from sharing personally in his selfless experience. If we are to be redeemed, if we are to be Christians with Him, we must in our turn undergo death and resurrection. We must practice what we preach! We must mean what we say and do what we mean. This is the unconditional love that Christ spoke about and practiced. In the end we shall be judged on that standard alone. Our own efforts to bring direction and meaning to our lives will, if touched by the love of God and expressed through love of our fellow human beings, have an eternal value.

They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old:
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun
and in the morning
We will remember them.
