REFLECTION

From the Gospel this weekend, Jesus gives us the heart of the Christian life: “You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind” and “You shall love your neighbour as yourself.”

These two commandments cannot be separated. Our love for God must be reflected in the way we treat others. It is easy to pray, attend Mass, and speak about faith, but the real test comes when we must forgive someone who has hurt us, show patience with a difficult person, or reach out to someone who feels forgotten.

The person who needs our love most is right in our own home. A kind word, a listening ear, or a sincere apology can become a powerful expression of God’s love. Let us ask ourselves: Does my love for God make me more loving toward others? When we love our neighbour sincerely, we make God’s invisible love visible in the world.

1. How do I show my love for God through my daily treatment of others?
2. Who in my life needs my compassion, forgiveness, or attention?
3. What one concrete act of love can I offer this week without expecting anything in return?
